William Sydney Porter, who wrote under the name of O. Henry, was a United States short-story writer, best-known for his descriptions of the many kinds of people he observed and knew in New York City. He wrote about 600 pieces of fiction, and his collections of stories were very popular during the first decade of the 20th century.

He was born in the state of North Carolina. When he was three, his mother died, and he was sent to a school taught by an aunt. At 15 he left school to work in his uncle's shop, but he soon moved to Texas. He loved the life of the Southwest, and he learned to speak Spanish. In Texas he was a bookkeeper and bank clerk. He also worked for a while on a large farm.

After his marriage to Athol Estes in 1887, he began to write funny pieces for newspapers. He became so interested in writing that he bought a paper and made it a humorous weekly called The Rolling Stone. He wrote most of the pieces for it and even illustrated the articles himself. When the paper did not make enough money, he took a job writing for the Houston Daily Post as a reporter and journalist.

In 1896 he was asked by the police to return to Austin, Texas, from Houston, to answer charges that he had taken money from the bank where he had worked. If he had returned, he might have been cleared of the charges. Instead, he ran away to New Orleans, Louisiana, then to Central America, and finally to Mexico.
